Rights group questions Egypt deaths

CAIRO (AFP) — The Egyptian Human Rights Organisation Sunday published witnesses' statements indicating that Cairo police may have killed 10 militants in cold blood, contradicting the official version that they died in clashes. The organisation said it had submitted the information to the authorities, demanding an explanation to "dispel doubts" about two police raids in Cairo in February. However, it had not yet received a response. The witnesses gave accounts of the police killing of seven militants in the Zawya Al Hamra district on Feb. 1 and three in the Sayyeda Zeinab district on Feb. 14. Witnesses said police arrived in the Zawya Al Hamra district accompanied by a bearded man "who bore visible marks of blows and torture and was leading the police to the apartment where the seven suspected Islamic militants were hiding." The said they later heard shots lasting 12 seconds.

AMMAN — Yemeni leaders Sunday signed a reconciliation and reform agreement designed to end a six-month political crisis and bring about reforms to steer the course of 44-month-old united Yemen,

His Majesty King Hussein, who played a key role in mediating the crisis, hosted the ) - J<sub>25</sub>; signing of the 32-page docuiko has 🦡 ment by Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh and Vice-President Ali Salem Al Beidh and 35 other Yemeni political leaders at the Raghadan

> The agreement seeks to end bitter differences that emerged between the leaders of former North and South Yemen which merged and produced today's, united Yemen in May 1990.

The differences stemmed from southern complaints that the northern leaders were seeking to turn the merger into domination and that they were not giving enough attention to developing the southern areas of Yemen which were part of Marxist South Yemen.

A spate of violence, which emeni leaders blamed of "extremist elements," exacer-

The King, in a brief speech at the signing ceremony, expressed optimism that the reconciliation and reform agreement would lead to healing all Yemeni differences.

"We see this agreement as a resumption of the Yemeni march towards unity and a means to enhance the democratic process in Yemen," the King said in his speech at the ceremony, broadcast live on radio and television.

The King, who sat between President Saleh and Vice-President Beidh during the ceremony, urged the Yemeni leaders to put aside their differences for sake of national unity and the Yemeni people.
"The document represents a genuine orientation towards fulfilling the goals of Yemen's unity, which we hope will serve as an advance model of the state of law where sound relations among the various authorities should prevail," said the King.

The vice-president said the agreement "represents national consensus and not a document accepted by any specific

Debate on draft tenancy law put off after heated exchanges

By Ayman Al Safadi Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN — The Lower House of Parliament Sunday cut short a debate on a draft temporary law on tenancy so that deputies and the government could have more time to reexamine a clause that denies landlords the right to evict tenants even if the lease ends.

The Judiciary Committee recommended that the House endorse article five of the draft law which says "the tenant can continue to occupy the rented property after the lease ends even if he and the landlord have agreements that the property should be evacuated."

But Islamic Action Front (IAF) deputies Hammam Said. Ahmad Kofahi and Abdul Munem Abu Zant argued that the relationship between the landlord and the tenant be conducted on the basis of contrácts they sign. Sheikh Abu Zant argued that tenants should evacuate the rented property after the lease expires so that landlords can rent their properties out at rates that correspond with economic changes or use it to house members of their fami-

Leftist Deputy Bassam Haddadin appealed to the IAF deputies to consider the social implications such a law would have, claiming that a powerful lobby of landlords is exercising pressure to have the law amended in this direction.

PLO workstowards civilian hand-over deal this week

Combined agency dispatches

THE Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) hopes to strike a deal with Israel this week on the hand-over of civilian powers in Gaza and Jericho, one of the last few hurdles to Palestinian self-rule. Chief PLO negotiator Nabil Shaath said last week's talks in the Egyptian Red Sea resort of Taba had been successful and

BEIRUT (Agencies) -Lebanese President Elias Hrawi has denounced last week's rocket attack on northern Israel, but said guerrillas fighting the Israeli military presence in South Lebanon are engaging in legitimate resist-

Mr. Hrawi's statement came shortly before he met in Damascus Sunday with Syrian President Hafez Al Assad following U.S. calls to curb escalating guerrilla warfare against Israel from South Lebanon, officials said.

The officials, who spoke in exchange for anonymity, said Mr. Hrawi met U.S. Ambassador Mark Hambley Saturday evening and condemned last Wednesday's Katyusha rocket attack, which damaged a factory but caused no casualties.

It was the first Katyusha attack on Israel since Hizbollah, which spearheads the guerrilla war, agreed last summer to halt such assaults.

Hrawi decries rocket attacks, but defends resistance Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin blamed a breakaway Palestinian faction led by ousted Fateh commander

> Munir Makdah in South Lebanon for the rocket attack. Colonel Makdah defected from the Fatch faction in the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) after its leader, Yasser Arafat, signed an autonomy accord with Israel on Sept. 13. "Random shooting of Katyushas is not resistance of occupation," Mr. Hrawi was quoted as saying in remarks that were splashed across the Sunday newspapers.

He was referring to Israel's maintenance of 1,100-squarekilometre "security zone" in South Lebanon to shield from such attacks.

"True resistance is the one that is carried out on occupied territory. This is legal resistance and no one has the right to ask us to stop it as long as Israel occupies our land in South Lebanon," Mr. Hrawi

Mr. Hrawi's denunciation of the attack suggests the Lebanese army might curtail renewed guerrilla activity by PLO dissidents, a move that could serve as a warning to Hizbollah.

There has been an ominous escalation of guerrilla attacks and Israeli reprisal since the Feb. 7 ambush by Hizbollah fighters that killed four Israeli troops and wounded five in the "security zone." Mr. Hrawi is the second senior Lebanese government leader to hold talks with Mr. Assad on the South Lebanon fighting in four days. Prime Minsiter Rafik Hariri held similar talks in Damascus Thursday.

Mr. Jomaa and other Palestinian officials complained that there was a political tendency in Lebanon to neglect the refugees and displaced until a new map emerged in the Middle East from the peace talks with ### the problem could be re-Libya rolls up the welcome

The following story was written during a trip to Libya by Reuter correspondent Abdul Aziz Barrouhi shortly before Saturday's report from diplomats that Libya had arrested illegal African immigrants with a view to deporting them.

mat for foreigners

TRIPOLI — The Libyan eyed the black Africans, wearing the trademark balaclava bats of poor immigrants here, as they sat on the side of the road.

"What are you awaiting for?" the Libyan asked peremptorily.

"God willing, for jobs," said one of the Africans, a refugee from one of the African countries whose inhabitants in the past have looked to oil-rich Libya as a place where the streets are paved with

But there are no more jobs for impoverished Africans, or even for well-off Western technicians and engineers, in colonel Muammar Qadhafi's sbunned country.

Libya, its economy hurt by falling oil revenues and crippled by partial sanctions imposed by the U.N. for its failure to turn over two suspects to the West for trial in connection with the 1988 Lockerbie airliner bombing, has rolled up the welcome

The General People's Congress (parliament) in January voted to expel anyone who had entered Libya illegally.

It ordered the government to gradually sack thousands of foreigners working as civil servants in Libyan public services and firms, mostly welleducated people like doctors, teachers and experts in various fields.

Diplomats say it has already detained hundreds of Africans as illegal immigrants, prior to sending them home. Most were from Chad, Niger and Mali.

There are, diplomats say, some 7,000 foreigners working for state-owned companies alone, or about 22 per cent of the workforce for those firms.

"We want to make places for Libyan workers and graduates," some of the 420 congress delegates said at the

The congress also banned new hiring of foreigners except "in rare specialities" and ordered Libyan embassies to be tough in issuing visas. It also imposed an entry tax for Tripoli-based diplomats said the measures could affect thousands of nationals from poor African countries such as Chad, Niger, Sudan and Mali whose presence beyond their visa expiration would have been overlooked in the past and most of whom are now in Libya illegally.

Even Egypt and North African states whose nationals flocked to Libya in the past are targeted.

Estimates of the number of aliens in Libya range up to about three million, including one million Egyptians, several thousand Asians and a like number of Western oil specialists. The number of Libyans is put at just over four Economics --- with Libya's main export oil now selling for some of the lowest prices in years — clearly plays a role, but there is an undercurrent of xenophobia as "If there is a water shortage in Libya, it is because there are three million foreigners," an official tells journalists visiting a man-made river designed to bring water from underground reserves under the southern desert to the northern cities.

Libya has a long history of expelling foreigners. In 1984 and 1985 it ordered out tens of thousands of Tunisian and Egyptian workers at a time of worsening relations with the governments of their coun-

It also sent 1,000 Niger nationals packing in 1990. Last November, Libya threatened to lay off thousands of Thai workers. It was apparently angry over Thailand's cooperation with the United States over fears that Thais were helping Libya

In another move intended to make foreigners feel less welcome, the congress made drinking alcoholic beverages punishable by fines of up to $10,000 and a prison term as long as six months. Offenders

Kabul cabinet proposes permanent peace formula

KABUL (AFP) — A special commission of Afghan cabinet members announced proposals Sunday to establish a permanent peace among the warring Afghan factions in Kabul, including a new assembly to pick a new president.

The proposals centre on the establishment of a special committee which will have two tasks: Securing a compromise agreement between the factions, and organising a loya jirga, or grand assembly, to elect a new president and cabinet. A four-day ceasefire, which ended Friday, followed 45 days of non-stop fighting in the capital, but this ceasefire has yet to be extended to formalise the uneasy and unofficial truce currently enjoyed in Kabul. The proposal for a loya jirga is a throwback to December 1992 when President Burhanuddin Rabbani was elected in a controversial assembly called the Shoora Ahl-i-Hal va Aqd, the legality of which was challenged by some rival factions. Whether called a loyal jirga or Shoora Ahl-i-Aqd, the idea is for a grop to vote for the nation's leader. The cabinet commission proposes that the loya jirga be convened within the next five months, that is, by the end of Mr. Rabbani's current tenore as president. Delegates elected to the loya

Whether former communists will be eligible to participate was not explained. Prime Minister Gulbuddin ate of youen Hekmatyar is allied with the ex-communist forces of Uzbek General Abdul Rashid Dostum, who tried unsuccessfully to unseat Mr. Rabbani in the coup of January 1994. Mr. Hekmatyar's successful military challenge to Mr. Rabbani's 1992 election as president won him the prime ministerial nomination in March Mr. Rabbani's declaration of a holy war against Gen. Dosturn may prove to be a sticking point for acceptance of the cabinet peace package if it means Gen. Dostum will be Saturday night's two- to three-hour exchange of heavy artillery and light weapons' fire was an indication of the latent tension between the warring factions, regardless of their willingness to extend the expired ceasefire.

Food shortages worsen in Kabul KABUL (AP) - This battered Mr. Hekmatyar's forces con-

capital is suffering perhaps its worst food shortage in Afghanistan's 15-year war, as heavy fighting and blockaded roads have reduced the city's food stocks to a bare minimum. Bread, meat and other essentials are still available in the markets, but prices have skyrocketed beyond the reach of many ordinary residents, most of whom are jobless.

The United Nations and the International Committee for the Red Cross have both warned that food shortages could soon lead to starvation unless fresh supplies reach the besieged capital soon. "No food or medicine is being allowed to go into Kabul," Peter Stocker, the head of the Red Cross delegation in Kabul, said during a brief visit to neighbouring Pakistan. "We estimate we have one to two weeks of food stocks left.'

Afghans have proved amazingly resourceful during the country's long war, which now involves numerous factions battling for control of Kabul. Much of the Central Asian nation is mountainous and barren, but there have been no major food crises. The extended family network has ensured that everyone manages to get enough to eat.

However, President Burhanuddin Rabbani's forces have been embroiled in a fierce battle with its rivals since Jan. 1, disrupting the food network in the capital.

Two major markets in Kabul have been destroyed by the fighting. Some 50,000 people are living in schools, mosques and other public buildings, dependent on handouts. Another 300,000 have been forced from their homes and have moved in with other families in Kabul, according to the Red Cross. These two groups account for roughly half of the city's population. Conditions worsened in recent days due to a blockade of the main roads leading into Kabul by one of Mr. Rabbani's enemies, Prime Minister Gul-buddin Hekmatyar.

trol the eastern and southern outskirts of Kabul, including the all-important highway that leads to Pakistan, the traditional route for imported food Pakistan's Foreign Minister Sardar Assef Ali met with Mr. Hekmatyar on Friday in the eastern Afghan city of Jalalabad. Mr. Assef Ali said Mr. Hekmatyar agreed to let food supplies enter the capital, but there's no evidence yet that the situation has changed.

The blockade has not been airtight. Sometimes Mr. Hekmatyar's men allow truck drivers to pass for a fee. "Food is still coming in."

acknowledged Andreas Pfiffner, deputy head of the Red Cross in Kabul. But the Red Cross and the U.N. have halted their food convoys until they get guarantees of safe passage from the factions.

Meanwhile, Afghans survive thanks to the safety net of the extended family. Those making some money - shopkeepers, auto mechanics, and others providing essential goods — typically support large families that include less fortunate relatives.

Mohammad Gul, a 32-yearold security guard, said he and his brother, a bus driver, pool their two salaries to support more than 20 people currently staying in Mr. Gul's threestorey adobe home.

"They have some savings of their own, so we don't have to buy all their food," Mr. Gul said of his guests. "But we help

Out. There is little hope the fighting will end soon. The factions fought for 13 years to oust a communist government in April 1992. Since then they have been feuding among themselves. Mr. Rabbani's forces, conmanded by Ahmad Shahe Masoud, have proved them-selves capable of withstanding the heavy assault by Mr. Hekmatyar and his ally, warlord

Man arrested for stabbing ex-brother-in-law in Irbid

By Rana Husseini Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN - A 34-year-old Irbid man Saturday was arrested by police for stabbing a 3.-year-old man to death in an open marketplace, police reports said. According to the report, Ahmad M. confessed to the killing of Rashed M. following an argument regarding Rashed's ex-wife (Ahmad's sister).

Ahmad said he was told that his ex-brother-in-law was at the main vegetable market in Irbid. The suspect said he went to the market to discuss the issue of his sister's recent divorce with Rashed.

The suspect told police that when the argument became heated, he was attacked by Rashed who had lifted a vegetable scale and threw it at Ahmad striking him in the

Ahmad said he picked up a hack knife that was nearby and stabbed Rashed several times in the chest and sto-

Both men were taken to Princess Basma Hospital. The stabbing victim died shortly afterwards.

The attending doctor, who examined the body, said Rashed's death was attributed to two stabs to the

The suspect was treated for head injuries and was listed in fair condition.

Police said they arrested the suspect after he was released from hospital and are

Fire next door holds victims, Jordan Times staff in suspense

By Ica Wahbeh Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - A house on fire in the winter in Jordan, with no victims, would normally pass with little notice. After all, so many times people ignore advice, warnings or stories heard on the grapevine on how easily fires start at times. But when you witness one, as we, members of the staff of the Jordan Times, did yesterday, in the building next door, then a story might be told, or has to be told. At about 4:45 p.m. smoke started billowing from the windows of the upper floor of the four-storey stone apartment building adjacent to this newspaper's offices. Workers in the neighbouring yard started shouting to alert somebody, everbody, the right person(s).

Our journalists (hopefully alert for this kind of situation) immediately called the fire department. About half an hour later (no exaggeration) a fire engine showed up. Alas, it was on the wrong side of University Road which is divided by an islan ... nat stretches the distance from the Al Ra'i building to the far end of University of Jordan and back. It took the snail-paced machine another ten minutes to reappear and a few more crucial minutes to slowly manoeuvre its way towards the wall surrounding the building afflicted by fire. The guest Arab workers did more than their fair share of a job the "well-trained" firefighters were supposed to do on their own, including clearing the way for the engine to inch its way and helping with the water hose.

After the hose was taken to the upper floor and the clearly unprotected firemen came back running to connect it to the engine, they discovered that it was the wrong side of the hose. Up and down went our well-drilled firemen (four in fact, including the "supervising" officer). But finally they connected the hose.

A moment or two of suspense passed as we were preparing to see the longawaited moment when the water would start flowing. But a few more minutes lapsed fruitlessly.

By now nearly 45 minutes had passed during which terrified neighbours crowded their balconies. Fortunately, though, one of our support staff. Raed

Musa Nowar, had already entered the house, crawled on the floor to the gas cylinder which was not shut off, gone to the balcony and opened

Efficient and very courageous for a man who never wore a uniform, we should think. At least faster than those who needed to be Many minutes later an ambulance showed up. In time to pick up casualties, we feared.

Luckily however, nobody was hurt in the fire, and it was eventually put out.

A happy ending, except that everything in the apartment was consumed by fire and the families living on that floor broke their fast on ... water, what else. Nothing, it seems, was edible as smoot had covered everything.

Drills be done, but apparently by the firemen themselves, before ordinary citizens should be required to do so. Fire-proof clothing and masks should be a must. The worst should be assumed; a fire is not a picnic. after all.

A lesson was learn? We certainly hope so. But if not, we will wait for Wednesday, when a national conference on public safety will be held, not very far from the building that was nearly all gutted by a fire that was started by a lady who kept her food cooking on a gas stove and left the Incidently, nobody in the building thought of switching the electricity off upon hearing the news of a fire about the house. It took an outsider (a colleague again) to pull the lever down and hope some damage would be prevented

Time for law is now

IT IS a healthy development for our democratisation process that 21 deputies have now called on the government to submit a new draft law on national election. The last change on the electoral law was introduced in literally the 11th hour before the last Parliament elections, culminating in the incorporation of the controversial one-man, one-vote formula. Otiar deficiencies in the original law of 1986 were left without proper redress due to, among other considerations, the pressure of time. The incomplete work on that crucial piece of legislation was also due to the fact that the 1993 amendment was articulated and adopted in the absence of any parliamentary debate and passed as a temporary law by the Cabinet while parliament was in a recess.

Given the fact that the electoral law is the very foundation on which any operational democracy can hope to function, it would seem timely to start afresh with a broad review of the existing legislation. Any such effort, however, needs to be comprehensive and not piecemeal in its methodology or

Instead of waiting till the last months of Parliament's lifetime, now is the time to begin the process of correcting the current omissions in the law on elections. By way of examples, politicians can list several key issues that require additional reflection and scrutiny. On top of the list they could mention the other dimension of the one-man, one-votesystem which has escaped the serious attention of the government, namely, to provide voters equal voting rights by drawing the boundaries of electoral districts on the basis of population density. The country give unequal voting rights to citizens by assigning unequal number of parliamentary seats to the same number of people on the basis of other grounds that are unacceptable to true democracies.

Other concerns that require attention include minority rights; the way minorities in Jordan are treated leaves much to be desired. Minorities are supposed to enjoy cultural, linguistic, religious and political rights, and we wonder if the current Election Law deals with this issue in a proper manner. We are not suggesting that minorities are ill treated. As a matter of fact, the present Election Law safeguards the political representations of minority religions and, in this sense, goes beyond what current international human rights instruments call for. Still, minority issues have other dimensions that any new law must deal with. For instance, we do not think minorities should have allocated seats in Parliament as a way of guaranteeing them representation and rights. These can be safeguarded by other means that need to be seriously debated first and approved later.

To be sure, there are other, no less important, issues and considerations that need to be tackled by both the Parliament and government when the real debate begins. That is why in fact the sooner the process of debate begins the better. The 21 parliamentarians who have taken the initiative in this regard deserve to be complemented for their timely move. We certainly do not want to wait till the end of the term of this Parliament before work on the new legislation begins.

If efforts to change the law are left until the last moment, like the case was last year, tempers will flare and narrow constituency considerations will prevail, making the task of being objective and fair so much more difficult for everybody concerned.

ARABIC PRESS COMMENTARIES

THL EYES of the Arab masses are turned towards Amman where the Yemeni leaders meet Sunday to sign a reconciliation and reform agreement to end the dispute among them over political, social and economic matters in their country, said Al Ra'i Arabic daily Sunday. Perhaps the Jordanians, more than other Arab people, take pride in this event occurring in their capital and no doubt their delight over the reconciliation among the Arab leaders reflect the true feelings of His Majesty King Hussein, who spared no effort towards the attainment of this objective and towards preserving unity among Yemeni brothers, said the daily.

A COLUMNIST in Al Ra'i reflected on the work of engineers in Jordan, saying that their number is now estimated to be 30,000 with more students oriented towards engineering profes ions. Salah Jarrar said that in Jordan, there are at least two universities: The Jordan University of Science and Technology and the Applied Sciences University, in addition to a number of community colleges specialising in some kind of engineering. Yet it is noticed that whenever a machine breaks down and whenever proper maintenance of equipment are needed by a firm or factory, seldom any engineer can be found to do the job, said the writer. Also, whenever a spare * is needed for a broken machine none can be manufactures of ordan and the concerned firm awaits the new shipments - replacements coming from Europe and other

The lost tribe of the last land

By Walid Al Fahoum

The writer, of the Nazarethbased Arab Association for Human Rights, is former deputy mayor of Nazareth. The following is a paper he sub-symposium on Trans ence and Partnership which was held in Rome last month.

I COME from Nazareth, the city of the holy land where Jesus Christ lived his life, and one that is considered the capital of the Israeli-Palestinian Arabs who hold Israeli passports since the creation of the state of Israel in 1948. This state insists on calling itself the state of the Jews, rather than one for all its When Israel was created as a state, its Arab inhabitants were estimated at 149,000 but now they have grown into 800,000 citizens, which means that in nearly five decades they have multiplied five fold. Indeed, they can be rightly considered as the lost tribe because the world does not give them due recognition, neither does any country care to mention their existence or wants to learn about their problems. No one consider them a national minority or natives of Palestine.

The Palestinian minority living in Israel since 1948 are marginalised by the Jewish state in political, social, educational and economic fields and are being discriminated against, legally in some cases, in what we call overt discrimination and sometimes tactly in what we call covert discrimination.

To back the discrimination system, the Israelis have enacted more than 30 laws like the absent land owners law of 1950, which has enabled the Israeli governments to systematically seize all Arab lands whose owners had left the country in 1948. The same law prevented other owners, who had not left their homeland but had moved from original villages to other areas within the state of Israel, from returning home.

The 1950 law, together with the nationality law of 1952 and the military service law of 1956, are mere examples of overt discrimination against the Arab population of Israel.

The 1953 law on education and the 1984 on the Knesset (Israel's parliament) stipulate that no Arab can run as a candidate in a general election unless he or his political group recognises Israel as the state of the Jews. It should be noted here that recognition is not of the state of Israel, but rather of the state as being solely state of the Jews.

Furthermore, an Israeli law on national insurance, which links allocations and allowances for children to national service, provides for allocations for the Jewish children to receive double the amount earmarked for the Arab children. This is an example of the so-called covert discrimination.

The Palestinian minority has lived within the boundaries of Israel and under Israeli military rule until the year 1966. The Arab inhabitants were confinded to closed zones and were only allowed to go in or out of their territory through special

This regime has resulted in destrictive consequences both to the Arab inhabitants and their lands.

The 1948-1966 period brought about the emergence of a small group of Arab citizens who opted to serve as agents for the Israeli authorities.

The Israelis have in addition deprived the majority of the Arab population of the right of developing their lands which also led to the seizure of Arab land. According to statistics, the Palestinian Arabs living in Israel since 1948 merely own on 4.5 per cent of the total area of land within the state of Israel, with the Arab population accounting for only 17 per cent of the population, down from 67 per cent in 1948.

After losing their lands, the Arab inhabitants could not be considered as an agricultural community, neither were they developed and organised as workers in other fields. They have been living on the periphery of the Israeli agricultural sector and not recognised as part of the workers community either. There is no doubt that these Israeli measures against the Palestinians led to very damaging effect on the infrastructure, causing Arab industry to remain backward. As to the Palestinian bedouins, Israel was keen on moving them from their lands to urban areas thus causing demographic changes prior to stealing the bedouin land. Palestine has been inhabited over the past 10,000 years and has witnessed civilisations rise and fall including the Cannanites, our ancestors. It is an established historical fact that we are a small minority of people living within a state — the Jewish state and facing problems with the Arab Nation and also with the Palestinian kinsmen. This minority can best be described as the "lost tribe."

Before 1948, the Palestinians lived in 478 towns and villages, of which 370 have been partially or totally destroyed by the Israelis after the 1948 war and the Arab inhabitants have never been able to return to their lands and homes. Indeed, some people, whose villages were totally destroyed, live a few kilometres away from their original homes like those of the villages of Saffourieh, Mujeidel and Maaloul - three villages close to the city of Nazareth. These inhabitants are considered absent land owners despite the fact that they still exist in the state of Israel and carry Israeli identity cards.

These are displaced citizens who were forced out of their lands and homes in 1948. Originally, they were estimated at 81,000 but now they are estimated to have multiplied five

Israel does not recognise 120 Arab villages inhabited by 50,000 people and so they are forced to live the life of 10th century, without electricity, running water, roads, schools, health utilities. They live in constant fear of their homes being demolished or confiscated by the Israeli authorities. We are living an era of ethnic and religious minorities .. This is a world wide problem that can only be solved through activating the basic human rights principles.

We believe that there can be no peace without social, economic and political justice to all minorities. Indeed, ethnic or religious minorities constitute a powder keg that is apt to go off as a result of continued repression, like that which occurred in Europe. It is rather difficult to predict when and where the explosions might occur.

It was not possible to predict the 158 events when the Arabs of a Galilee and Nasareth clashed with the Israeli forces. Likewise, it was not possible for any one to forsee the 1960 events when five Arab youths were killed near Gaza and in the 1976 "Land Day", when Arab-owned lands were confiscated and in 1988 when Israeli authorities demolished 15 homes in Taybeh town as well as the massacre that occurred in 1990 at Richon Litsion and another that occurred in Al Aqsa Mosque of Jerusalem in 1990.

It is hard to predict what could emerge from the PLO-Israel declaration of principles, signed in Washington last September, and its impact on the identity of Palestinians living under Israeli rule since 1948.

The problem of this sector of the Palestinian people is an integral part of the whole Palestinian issue. I say to Europe that it bears a responsibility towards seeing justice done under the current "new world disorder."

Article 18 of the declaration issued by the the conference by European partiaments and non-governmental organisations, held by mid 1988, calls for the countries of the northern hemisphere to help implement principles and rules as stated under the 1951 Geneva Pact regarding the legal status of refugees and displaced persons. The article provides for the protection of refugees from the Third World and ensuring their safe repatriation.

We call on the Europeans to work in the spirit of that declaration and ensure the safe return of the Palestinian refugees or compensating those not wishing to return home as called for by the United Nations.

Europe, in general, and Britain, in particular, hold special responsibility towards the palestinians as Britain was entrusted with a mandate to rule Palestine until 1948. Germany, too has a social responsibility because it is responsible for the Nazi atrocities that partly led to the Israeli occupation of Palestine. We are the victims and we are the lost tribe that has been forgotten by the World.

As a chapter of the Arab association for human rights in Nazareth, we call on this seminar to take what I have just outlined seriously and to pass decisions clearly addressing our plight. As an ethnic Palestinian group in Israel, we feel that we do not have a safe sand secure future.

The world does not need a U.S.-Japanese divorce

HONG KONG - Asian reaction to the breakdown of U.S.-Japanese trade talks has been muted. Editorials have expressed sorrow, not anger. knock, but a modest one by recent volatile standards. Yet deeper down there is that tension that comes with not knowing what to expect next.

Nothing dramatic is likely to happen soon. But at the very least, nations have to consider the consequences of U.S.-Japanese frictions for themselves, and contemplate difficult choices should those deteriorate.

Last year's debates over the respective merits of Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation and the East Asian Economic Caucus may appear less theoretical than they did

There is something visceral in Washington's attitude to Japan that cannot be explained either by trade specifics or by the economic outlook. Thanks to Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush. Asia may have misread the depth of antipathy toward Japan which exists in some influential quarters in the United States. Bill Clinton has taken the lid off this box of emotions by laying down targets that are not only impractical but contrary to traditional U.S. aversion to managed trade.

Mr. Clinton, the opportunist politician, may find it hard to put the lid back when he wants to. Logic is certainly missing from the present

There is no doubt that the Japanese overali current account surplus of $130 billion is unsustainable, as is a $50 billion trade surplus with the United States. There is no doubt either that Japan's economy needs further stimulus if it is to enjoy a domestic demandled recovery. Nor doubt that some of its markets have yet to be prised open. But this is a curious time for the United States to choose to threaten trade war.

The U.S. economy is recovering, jobs are being created U.S. firms are widely acknowledged to have enhanced their international competitiveness — through cost cutting, investment and technological excellence and not simply because of a weak

The Japanese surplus has probably peaked (despite low oil prices). Inflated last year by the rise of the yen, this year it should contract as export volumes are pressured by lack of competitiveness. Further yen strength will simply delay recovery in domestic demand. Nor will foreign threats do much to reform and stimulus efforts.

Strong U.S. action a year ago would have been more rational than today. Now it almost looks as if the United States is kicking Japan when it is down — revenge for insults that flowed the other way two years ago. It is this sense that the United States is being driven by its gut and not its head that is worrying others. Many in Asia are sympathetic toward U.S. complaints about Japan, feel that Japan deserves to be taught a trade lesson, yet worry deeply about the consequences of emotional and unilateral actions.

After all, the Bill Clinton now threatening Japan with sanctions is the same Clinton who was supposed to be so strongly behind multilateralism on trade as evidenced by efforts to conclude the Uruguay Round. This is the same Clinton who three months ago was hosting the APEC summit in Seattle, proclaiming the need for greater multilateral trade cooperation across the Pacific.

The Clinton who professes to believe in free trade and macroeconomic objectives is the same one who wants to impose numerical targets on specific sectors when it is the totality of trade that matters. In the short term, other Asian countries may well benefit from Japan's discomfiture. Korean and Taiwan companies are already exploiting the damage that the high yen is causing Japanese competitiveness. Southeast Asian subsidiaries of Japanese firms will do more exporting to the United States due to lower costs, while corporate Japan seeks all conceivable ways of reducing its surplus. But the longer-term impact on Asia will be highly disadvantageous. Japan may seem the villain for now, but the United States has other trading partners in Asia whose trade is as lopsided and which have much more obvious barriers to imports than does Japan. China is the most obvious. Korea is still an almost closed market for items such as cars. Add in the human rights issues, and the potential for new trade barriers against East Asia is formidable. In so far as the East Asian economies are linked, with Japan as supplier of capital the United States being the buyer of last resort for end ... products, any action against . Japan will have eventual knock-on effect. This would not as great now as 10 years ago, when a higher propor-tion of Asian exports went to U.S. markets, and before non-Japanese Asian brand names established themselves in the West. But it is still a very real concern.

Friction with Japan will add to the relative merits of Latin America over Asia as a location for investment and product sourcing. Thanks to the North American Free Trade Agreement and bilateral pacts, Latin America will enjoy significant nontariff advantages over Asian producers — and political weight in the United States.

Much though it may in theory want to, the United States cannot isolate its trade relationship with Japan from those elsewhere in Asia. Likewise, if Asian countries see the trans-Pacific relationship deteriorating they will look more seriously at the proposal of Malaysia's Prime Minister Mahathir Bin Mohammad for an East Asian Economic Caucus.

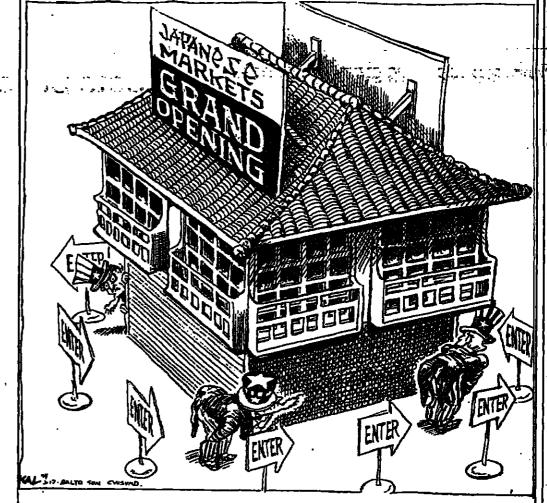

At present, they are far too dependent on the U.S. market to annoy a prickly Washington. At the same time, however, they rely heavily on Japan for capital. Logic dictates therefore that if there is friction across the Pacific, they will want to strengthen their trade ties with Japan, which will anyway develop naturally from an over-strong yen.

Nor, despite the rhetoric, can trade be isolated from security. Given the importance of the U.S. presence to regional stability, that is another reason for Asian anxiety.

Without the timely alarms provided by the prospect of a North Korean bomb and Vladimir Zhirinovsky's musings. U.S. force reductions might be more imminent that is now the case. But the flag follows trade - not vice versa. Weakening of the trade relationship will erode the security one. That will happen over time anyway, but it needs to be controlled and gradual if it is not to be disruptive. There is a gut instinct abroad that Mr. Clinton and Mr. Hosokawa, both politically weak, could lose control of events. That, not trade numbers, is the worry.

Washington short of Japan experts

By Gregory Clark

TOKYO - To anyone who knows Japan, or world trade, the demand that Tokyo set numerical targets for imports from the United States is Import targets fly in the face of recent GATT, APEC and NAFTA rhetoric. And what happens if other countries in trade deficit with Japan also demand fixed shares of Japan's market for imported goods?

To apply the targets, bureaucrats would have to strengthen control over the econon.w. Yet weakening bureauci ... control in Japan is supposed to be a major Clinton admir_uration goal.

The administration would no doubt argue that Japan is already so incorrigibly bureaucrat-controlled and anti-free-trade that a hardline approach is the only approach. This is fantasy talk, the result of reading too many half-backed anti-

In some areas the Japanese market is indeed closed. Bureaucratic collusion is one reason, but a much larger problem is incestuous private deals. In other areas Japan is more open than most countries. Overall, it is probably not much worse in this respect than France. U.S. exporters fail in Japan mainly because they do not try hard enough. In advance of the Hosokawa-Clinton talks, the U.S. timber export industry ran an advertisement here appealing for a fairer deal. The ad was well written and closely argued. The only problem was that it never got to be read by the Japanese: For convenience and to save money it was run in a small-circulation, English-language newspaper.

To succeed in Japan you need more than convenient gimmicks. You need to do your homework, show commitment for the long haul. You need to spend money. Above all, you need to realise that most people here operate in Japanese, not En-

The United States is right to want to act on the trade deficit. Encouragement for yen appreciation is one possible move, but at this stage it would probably send the frail Japanese economy into a tailspin. A better move just now would be to ask Japan for "voluntary" reductions in exports of specific goods, a policy that has worked well in

Unfortunately, Washington is too caught up in its own free trade rhetoric to realise that cutting exports from Japan is much easier and fairer than trying suddenly to expand exports into Japan.

It is also wasting time and energy telling Tokyo to cut taxes to reflate the economy. Tax cuts may work in consumption-happy societies like America's, but in Japan other and more drastic measures are needed.

The United States would do a lot better if it stopped trying to impose its own values and remedies and concentrated on getting more expertise about Japan. The Japanese press is full of accounts of bumbling by Washington's trade negotiators here in recent weeks. The current confrontation can only work to the benefit

Mr. Clinton, in his weekly radio address, said the threatened air strikes will help bring peace.
"Military force alone cannot guarantee that every heavy gun around Sarajevo will be removed or silenced," the president said. "But military force can make it more likely that Bosnian Serbs will seek a solution through negotiation rather than through Sarajevo's strangulation and that more innocent civilians will continue to Mr. Clinton said there were encouraging signs that NATO's ultimatum was working. But, as U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher observed, "the Serbs have disappointed us many times be-

"At best, it's an interim White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said of the Serbs' withdrawal. "I don't think anybody will stand

The lingering threat

NATO's air strike warning against Serbs is first step that could be reversed

The possible use of American warplanes — and the risk that carries for U.S. pilots would not have ended by Sunday. If Serb guns are detected, say, three weeks from now within the demilitarised zone, they still would be subject without warning to NATO

For most of his administration, Mr. Clinton has anguished about the war in Bosnia. He's called it the most frustrating foreign policy probiem in the world. It's also been the source of sharp differences with allies. For months, the allies balked at Mr. Clinton's calls for tougher action. Mr. Clinton resisted their pleas for putting American ground forces in Bosnia. When the allies finally agreed last August to air strikes, their threats proved

"I want to be clear," Mr.

Clinton said Saturday. "Europe must bear most of the responsibility for solving this problem and indeed it has." There has been no shortage of critics accusing Mr. Clinton Curiously, none of the debate has had much of a political impact on Mr. Clinton perhaps explaining why he's been reluctant to put the United States in an aggressive leadership role.

of vacillation.

"His approval rating is still quite high," said Norman Orn-stein, a political analyst at the American Enterprise Institute. When you look at the ups and downs (in the polls) it would be hard to get any significant correlation" between Bosnia and Mr. Clinton's ratings.

'Nobody in America knows where Bosnia is," said Republican polister Bill McInturff. "Nobody's focusing on the issue beyond, 'gee, it's too bad these guys are slaughtering each other'. There's no constituency for dramatic action in Bosnia. Nobody has been spending the time and effort explaining what U.S. interests

"The American public is not very much engaged in this issue," agreed Democratic pollster Mark Mellman. "If we were to use American force you would see a rally-aroundthe-flag effect but it would be fairly temporary as it was with George Bush after the war against Iraq."

The administration hopes NATO's threat will energise Bosnia's troubled peace talks, which resume next month in Geneva. "You cannot separate power and diplomacy," a senior administration official

But the White House acknowledges that peace prospects are fragile.

Jordan's defendable case

By Waleed Sadi

JORDAN HAS a date with the International Human Rights Committee (HRC) on March 22 and 23 of this year to present its third periodic report on its commitments and obligations under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

The two previous encounters with the committee proved inconclusive in the sense that many questions remained unanswered. The idea behind submitting periodic reports to the 18-member tribunal is to update the information on the country's human rights developments and fill in the gaps of previous sessions.

It is noteworthy to recall that the HRC is unlike other United Nations human rights for a in the sense that its methods of work is not parliamentarian in style but close to the working of a judicial body where the issues are dissected and analysed in a judicious manner on the basis of law and

No wonder the members of this body include mostly jurists who have developed long expertise in interpreting and examining international conventions and treaties. Against this backdrop, the tribunal, which will be hearing Jordan's third report, does not expect rhetorical submissions but rather a systematic presentations based on fact and law very carefully and meticulously documented. It would be wrong, therefore, to rely on diplomats to engage the human rights body in the painstaking dialogue, since diplomats are not very well versed in the nitty-gritty aspects of the country's legislations and practices. The rule of thumb in this regard is to dismiss the submissions of diplomats as either inaccurate or propogandist. What then can Jordan's delegation, that has the rendez yous with the HRC in March, expect from its dialogue with its human rights experts?

The first thing that our side can anticipate is the usual and chronic question about the status of the ICCPR in Jordanian laws. Paragraph 1 of Article 2 of the Covenant stipulates that "each state party.... undertakes to respect and to ensure to all individuals within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction the rights recognised in the present Covenant, without any distinction of any kind.." Paragraph 2 of the same article is even more explicit about the need to incorporate the provisions of the Covenant in domestic laws. It reads as follows: "Where not already provided for by existing legislative or other measures, each state party to the present Covenant undertakes to take the necessary steps, in accordance with its constitutional process and with the provisions of the present Covenant, to adopt such legislative or other measures as may be necessary to give effect to the rights recognised in the present Covenant.

These legally binding principles have been interpreted by the committee as imposing on each and every state party an option either to incorporate the same provisions of the Covenant into its domestic laws or to amend its existing laws in order to give them specific effect. Should there be a discrepancy between municipal law and the terms of the ICCPR, prior to the completion of the process calling for giving explicit legal effect to the provisions of the ICCPR, the well developed jurisprudence of the committee calls for giving the Covenant articles precedence over domestic laws including its organic law.

This is where Jordan may encounter difficulties b now the status of the ICCPR has not been specific. with iron clad assurances.

In its third periodic report, which is due for consideration ; ive this spring, the reference to this point could be even less : satisfactory from the Committee's point of view since there is no a proviso added to the earlier submission that makes the superiority of the Covenant over domestic laws contingent on 1 S not interfering with state security. This line of approach is usually rejected by the members of the HRC and we better be :3 prepared to face this problem when our people defend & Jordan's report in March.

To be sure there will be other issues on the mind of the Committee members, mostly centred on the fairness of trials, length of detentions and arrests before trials, discrimination, if any, against women, and freedom of thought and religion. Some members, who are well known abolishinists when it comes to capital punishment, would surely express their concern about the carrying of the death sentence in the stases country. Others would still want to know why martial law system remained in effect for so long and what are the status of the special courts still operating in the Kingdom.

With all fairness, Jordan cannot expect to emerge scot free of all criticism on all counts. But it is also fair to say that the reports and submissions of even the most advanced nations of the world suffer from major deficiences. Jordan can expect to receive high marks for its democratic process, which is the foundation for the enjoyment of civil and political rights. I would not be shy in defending the country's effective measures in defence of law and order or even its application of the death penalty in certain category of very serious crimes. Our vily delegation can afford also to be candid about the incompletion of the process for the incorporation of all the provisions of the Covenant. Frankness in such circumstances is always a welcome news especially when the overall situation is more than satisfactory.

Federal Reserve chief steps up coposition to Clinton bank plan

ORLANDO, Florida (R) — Federal Reserve (Fed) Chairman Alan Greenspan criticised Saturday a Clinton administration plan to create a single U.S. bank regulator, saying it Would irreparably harm the Fed by turning it into an outof-touch "ivory tower."

Any savings from such a move would prove fleeting and it would hurt economic growth, as well as weaken the U.S. central bank's powers to . eversee the economy, Mr.

"If history is any guide, any short-term savings achieved by a monopoly regulator are likely to disappear with time." Mr. Greenspan told a meeting of the independent Bankers Association of America in this Florida city.

Last November, the Treasury Department unveiled a proposal to merge the regulatory duties of the four existing bank agencies into one federal banking commission, a plan t lat must be approved by Con-

Officials say it would promote economic growth and save up to $200 million a year by cutting duplicate regulation among agencies.

The Fed's role in regulating banks would be reduced, but it would still oversee monetary policy that moves short-term interest rates.

Mr. Greenspan argued a single regulator that lacks responsibility to oversee the eco-dent risk-taking by banks, thus limiting economic growth and stability.'

Moreover, Fed officials argue they need a direct role in bank supervision to conduct American monetary policy.

Mr. Greenspan advocated the central bank's alternative proposal to replace the four existing regulators with two and give the Fed control over 7.00 more banks.

Shanghai sets China's agenda with fast growth

SHANGHAI (R) — Shanghai Mayor Huang Ju. brushing side problems of inflation and overheating, has said that China's largest city would continue fast-paced economic frowth this year.

In an address to the opening session of the city's parliament that sets the tone for the national agenda, Mr. Huang described 1994 as a crucial year Yor reform.

He warned lagging state fac-tories in Shanghai, China's leading industrial centre, that the crunch was coming and they would either have to stem their losses or face bankruptcy. Mr. Huang's speech reflected all the priorities of patamount Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, who spends his winters in Shanghai and uses the city as a platform to campaign for accelerated economic development.

"If we want to speed up development we must... dare to face challenges." Mr. Huang said. Mr. Huang made no mention of austerity measures Beijing has announced to rein in credit and investment, which is fuelling inflation that reached 14.5 per cent nationally and an alarming 20 per cent in China's major cities last year.

He called for growth in Shanghai of 12 per cent this year, lower than last year's 14.9 per cent, but still higher than the national average.

The national economy grew by 13 per cent in 1993, and Beijing wants to slow the rate to 9-10 per cent in 1994.

Shanghai's People's Congress, like similar provincial meetings all over China, precedes the National People's Congress in Beijing, scheduled for March 10 this year. It offers a preview of the themes that will be stressed at the national level.

Mr. Huang said losses by state enterprises were mount-ing and made clear that a shake-up would mean factory closures and job losses, a political explosive issue particularly at a time of rising inflation. The worst state enterprises would have their bank accounts frozen," Mr. Huang

"We will experiment with bankruptcy for a minority of enterprises who, after hard efforts, have no hope of stemming losses and cannot pay their debts," he said. However, Mr. Huang warned of the danger of unemployment, which along with nflation is the biggest worry for Chinese workers. Many Shanghai factories have reduced working hours.

Mr. Huang conceded that falling income for some workers and a rising rate of unem-ployment had already caused hardships. But it noted that real wages in the city had risen by an average of nine per cent

Shanghai is dubbed the dragon's head" of the Chinese economy for charging ahead with reform, and Mr. Huang told delegates gathered in the Stalinist-style Shanghai Exhibition Centre that further innovations are planned this

He praised the city's stock market, the biggest in China, and said work was well underway to open the first national gold market in the city.

UAE banks recover from bad debts

ABU DHABI (AFP) — United Arab Emirates (UAE) banks have recovered from their worst bad debt problem by building large reserves and are now earning as much as they did during the oil boom. bankers have said.

"The bad debt problem no longer exists as the banks have managed to overcome the crisis by building large reserves from their earnings and taking measures in line with central bank instructions," said Abdullah Al Ghurair, chairman of the UAE Banks' Association.

The crisis hit in the mid-1980s, inflicting heavy losses on many UAE banks and forcing some of them to merge to avert collapse.

It was caused by the accumulation of bad and doubtful debts due to a rush in extending loans to the private sector during the oil boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Many businessmen were unable to pay back when they suffered from losses after a sharp decline in oil prices and

The National Bank of Abu Dhabi, the biggest UAE bank, was the worst hit by the crisis given its large loans. It rebounded into profit only recently after it used all its earnings to cover the bad debt.

Malawi increases fuel prices BLANTYRE, Malawi (R) -

Malawi has increased fuel prices by as much as 23 per cent with effect from this weekend.

A government statement blamed the falling value of the Malawi Kwacha, floated against a basket of mostly Western currencies two weeks ago to try to boost exports.

Petrol went up from K3.38 (about 35 cents) a litre to K3.80 (39 cents), an increase of 12.4 per cent. Diesel rose by 14 per cent from K2.91 (30 cents) per litre to K3.32 (34 cents). Paraffin (kerosene) went up by 23.2 per cent from K1.72 (18 cents) a litre to

"I can't hazard a figure at this moment but growth this year will be very slim, if any. It will be a year of trying to recover from the ravages of the drought as well as the cut of aid by foreign donors," he pointed

cent of export earnings of Malawi, a poor and landlocked country of 8.7 million people. In 1993 farmers produced 48,000 kilogrammes of tobacco - down 10,000 kilogrammes from the previous year. The crop earned 234 million kwacha ($39 million ast current prices) versus 400 million kwacha ($66.6 million) in 1992. "But this year the rains have not only been late but uneven. In some growing areas, the crop is a disaster." Mr. Jana said. "Add to that the lower tobacco prices on world markets and increasing consumer resistance because of the antismoking lobby."

Aid donors, who cut off more than $300 millions in annual funding in 1992 to press for political reforms, have reinstated the aid.

The only problem is that aid inflows are taking too long and the country is very short of hard currency," Mr. Jana said. But on Feb. 4 central bank authorities floated the kwacha, abolished foreign exchange-regulations and asked the private sector to obntain hard cash from commercial banks. The kwacha has since fallen sharply, sparking price rises that are set to lift annual inflation above the present high of

IMF takes steps to expel Sudan

KHARTOUM (R) -- The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has told Sudan it has launched the process to terminate its IMF membership.

The government-owned Al Ingaz Al Watani newspaper reported Sunday that Sudan had, however, been given the chance to answer before a final decision was taken.

The newspaper quoted Fi-nance Minister Abdallah Hassan Ahmad as saying the decision to begin the process of expelling Sudan was taken at a meeting of the fund's board of directors in Washington on

Mr. Ahmad said the fund's technical experts would meet soon to consider Sudan's responses. If expelled, Sudan would be the first country to be thrown out of the fund since it was created shortly after World War II.

Sudan's troubled relations with the fund began in mid-1984 when the IMF stopped its standby credit facilities due to the government's failure to institute economic reforms. In Feburuary 1986, when the

'Saudi economy is cooling down'

DUBAI (R) - Saudi economic growth, which weakened in 1993 to one per cent after four years of sustained rises, could be in the red this year mainly because of weak oil prices, according to a forecast by a leading economist. "After five years of strong economic growth the Saudi economy is cooling down." said Henry Azzam, chief eco-nomist at the Jeddah-based National Commercial Bank in a study published in the bank's latest monthly report and received by Reuters Sunday.

Mr. Azzam's forecast showed negative GDP growth of 1.7 per cent in 1994 after a rise of one per cent in 1993 and 4.9 per cent in 1992.

But despite reports published abroad about weaknesses in the Saudi economy, figures published by Mr. Azzam show sustained private sector confidence. Repatriated capital stood $10 billion in 1993 after $13.7 billion in 1992 and $27 billion in 1991.

Mr. Azzam did not give a reason for the high 1991 figure. But it could be explained by the return of capital that fled the country after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Mr. Azzam said the likelihood that oil prices will remain low and an 18 per cent spending cut in the Saudi budget to the possible drop in gross domestic product (GDP).

"While the private sector is still doing quite well, the oil and government sectors ae lagging behind due mainly to the general weakness of the oil market," he said.

"We are forecasting a slight decline in this year's oil revenues due to the general bearishness of oil prices." added Mr. Azzam. But he did not give figures on oil income.

He said private sector GDP reached 5.1 per cent in 1993 and expected a four per cent growth in the sector's 1994 activities as the government steers the economy from growth based on public sector initiatives to private sector

In the last five years, the oil sector contributed an average 35 per cent of nominal GDP and 75 per cent of government revenues, Mr. Azzam added.

"The contractionary fiscal policies envisaged in this year's budget and the subdued levels of oil prices are expected to bring forth a drop in oil and public sector GDP. However private sector GDP is forecast to maintain the tempo of positive growth," he said. He said Saudi Arabia wa likely to stick to its policy of not cutting oil production unless all producers inside and outside the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries did the same.

He said that if Saudi Arabia maintains its average daily oil production of around eight million barrels per day, the kingdom's oil revenues are likely to be lower with GDP generated in the oil sector estimated to be down by 2.5 per cent in 1994.

He said however that the Lingdom remained an attractive market for international. business and expected capital inflow from domestic and foreign joint venture investors to continue.

Inflation was likely to stay at its projected rate of 1.5 per cent, he said.

Mr. Azzam said a small budget deficit was likely to emerge this year, but that if oil prices stabilised or went up then a balanced budget or even a small surplus could be recorded."

He said the decline in government expenditure would be partly male up for "by the expansionary plans of the autonomous government bodies. These institutions are being encouraged to meet the cost of big projects through domestic and regional borrowing as wel as by drawing on export credit agencies abroad."

He said Saudi Arabia was freezing new projects, curtailing security related programmes and limiting expenditure on projects underway to 43 billion Saudi riyals ($11.4 billion) in 1994.

"Large non-priority projects are being deferred or retendered," he said.

He said there were indications the kingdom, which has awarded a Só billion civilian aircraft deal to U.S. companies Boeing and McDonnel Douglas and stretched out arms payments over the next two years, was willing to reduce excessive defence spending.

Nairobi bourse chief urges swift privatisation

NAIROBI (R) - The chairman of the Nairobi Stock Exchange (NSE) has urged the government to speed up privatisation plans to enable more Kenyans to share in stock windfalls expected after partial deregulation set for July.

Jimnah Mbaru said the current interest and liquidity levels at the NSE would support any major share issue and asked the government to put up more firms for listing on the market.

Share prices on the NSE have soared five-fold over the past year, buoyed by economic reforms launched in the second half of 1993.

Mr. Mbaru said faster government sell-offs would enable Kenyans to buy more shares

Buthelezi endorses king's call for sovereign Zulu kingdom

PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa (Agencies) — In-katha Freedom Party (IFP) leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi Sunday endorsed the call by Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini for a sovereign Zulu kingdom and made a constitutional monarchy in Natal one of In-katha's "minimum demands."

Addressing 30,000 supporters in the Inkatha-dominated area of Taylors Halt outside this city, he reaffirmed his movement's decision to boycott the April's 26-28 allrace elections.

But he added that the Zulu

Nationalist Party would continue to negotiate despite its rejection of the latest constitutional compromise offered by the African National Congress

His call for a constitutional monarchy in Kwazulu-Natal came after the demand earlier this week by King Goodwill for a sovereign Zulu state. It appeared to have been adopted by Mr. Buthelezi as a-final bid to get a federal arrangement from the ANC and the government.

Mr. Buthelezi said he did not have to persuade anybody that the kingdom of Kwazulu was sovereign, "nor do I have to negotiate about the acceptance of its sovereignty."

going against the wishes of our king" he said. Mr. Buthelezi said he had seen the full text of the ANC's concessions Saturday and that they still did not meet Inkatha's demands.

However Inkatha wanted peace and that is why it would continue to negotiate.

While we know that we will defeat the plans of the ANC-SACP (South African Communist Party) alliance, we also know that victory will come at a great cost to all. Even at this late hour, we have avoided belligerance and we believe in continuing to negotiate."

"And you have told the world that you do not accept the constitution and will not be going to vote. That message came out loud and clear. Dare anyone now ignore it?"

Inkatha's other demands were for a federal state, a double ballot at regional and national levels, the right of future provinces to collect and distribute taxes and the power of Kwazulu/Natal to draft its own constitution.

Mr. Buthelezi Sunday condemned the weekend massacre of 15 rival ANC supporters.

"I condemn this carnage in the strongest possible terms...I sincerely hope that whoever is responsible for this act of violence against human lives will be tracked down in short order," he said in a statement.

ANC leaders in Natal province have blamed Mr. Buthelezi's Inkatha Freedom Party for the massacre, which was the worst political killing so far this year. .

Police spokesman Bala Naidoo told Reuters Sunday that a 15th victim, one of two people wounded in the slaying, died in hospital late Saturday.

Eleven people were shot and killed as they slept in an aban-doned farmhouse outside the rural village of Creighton and three others were killed as they tried to flee.

Police said two were 12 years old and 10 were teenagers. Mr. Naidoo said the sole survivor was too ill to talk about the attack by a group of men armed with knives and automatic rifles.

He said police were trying to piece together a detailed account of the incident, adding that first reports suggested the victims were on a votereducation drive in the area. "We have had some reports that the boys were demanding donations of 10 rand ($3,00) from each family, but we have not confirmed this."

Local ANC leader Harry Gwala told state radio Saturday that he blamed Inkatha for the murders.

Mr. Buthelezi said it was regrettable that ANC leaders had pointed fingers at Inkatha. Political violence is expected to intensify as South Africa prepares for its first all-race election in April. Inkatha, fearing ANC dominance in a post-apartheid South Africa, opposes the election and its leaders have called for members to peacefully resist the

"Those who don't want people to vote" were responsible for Saturday's massacre, local ANC official Zabuse Mlaba said Saturday, adding the area had previously been calm.

Police Sgt. Ben Lombaard said four attackers armed with assault rifles opened fire on the abandoned house. They then hacked at the bodies of their victims with knives, he said.

In Washington the White House denounced Saturday's violent attack in South Africa, calling it "a cowardly affront to the process of democratic re-

Mexico rebels, government to meet for peace talks

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (R) Mayan Indian rebel leaders were expected to meet with the Mexican government's envoy Sunday to open peace talks, but warned they will not end their seven-week-old uprising until they win major reforms.

The rebels are to be picked up from three separate points in the Lacandon jungle in the southern state of Chiapas and taken Sunday afternoon to the colonial city of San Cristobal De Las Casas, where they launched their rebellion in the early hours of New Year's Government peace commissioner Manuel Camacho Solis is to meet one group of guerrilla negotiators in the jungle and travel with them to the city one of Mexico's top tourist attractions.

Formal negotiations aimed at ending the uprising, in which more than 100 people were killed after the rebels seized several cities and towns, will begin Monday in San Cristobal's 16th century cathedral.

"We will not go to ask for pardon or to beg. We will not go to scrounge for handouts or to pick up the leftovers that fall from the full tables of the powerful," leaders of the rebel Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN) said in a statement released late Saturday.

"We will go to demand what is just and right for all people: Freedom, justice, democracy, everything for everyone, nothing for ourselves," they said. In persuading the rebels to come to the negotiating table, Mr. Camacho promised social and economic reforms in Chaipas but the precise agenda for the first round of talks has not been released and a quick solution to the crisis is thought unlikely.

Zapatista rebels say tehy took up arms to fight for land reform, indigenous rights and national democratic reforms. In response, the government insists national reforms will not be decided at the peace talks but says it will work to end decades of abuse and poverty suffered by Chiapas' Indian population.

The jalks are to be mediated by San Cristobal Bishop Samuel Ruiz, a controversial figure who has fought for indigenous rights throughout his 34 years in the post.

Three so-called security rings formed by Red Cross workers, non-governmental organisations and military police armed with just billyclubs were to be set up Sunday, and hundreds of police officers were deployed the cathedral late Saturday.

A ceasefire has held since Jan. 17 but the EZLN warned in its statement that they would renew attacks if the government deceives them at the negotiating table. "If lies return to the mouths of the powerful, our voice of fire will speak again," it said.

firebombs hit Belfast BELFAST (R) - Nine sus-

Suspected

pected IRA firebombs Sunday hit a string of shops, bars and restaurants across Belfast, police said.

The coordinated attacks followed a wave of seven firebombs in London stores Saturday that coincided with a summit meeting between British Prime Minister John Major and Irish leader Albert Reynolds.

A police spokesman, giving details of the Belfast fire-bombs, said: "The attacks caused only minor water and smoke damage. We believe the IRA is responsible."

Mr. Major and Mr. Reynolds are trying to give renewed impetus to a Northern Ireland peace initiative but the Irish Republican Army (IRA). fighting to oust Britain from the province, shows no willingness to lay down its arms and talk peace. Police in Northern Ireland said six devices went off in shops and two pubs shortly after 0100 GMT. The bombs caused minor damage and a seventh was made safe by security forces. The Royal Ulster Constabulary said there was a "strong possibility" that firebombs were also responsible for damage to three shops in the centre of Belfast.

Meanwhile, the president of the IRA's political wing, Sinn Fein, said in remarks published Sunday he did not believe the IRA would declare a temporary ceasefire in response to Anglo-Irish peace efforts. Gerry Adams told Dublin's

Sunday Business Post he would have been informed if the Irish Republican Army was considering a temporary truce to persuade the Irish and British governments to make concessions on their Northern Ireland

"In relation to a ceasefire, I would have thought somebody would have told me. You are talking about demilitarisation. I cannot see any of the armed factions taking leaps in the dark at all."

Reuters this month quoted Republican sources across Ireland as saying the IRA was debating a temporary ceasefire as a half-way step instead of the complete end to its 25-year war against Britain which the Anglo-Irish plan calls for.

Other media reports said the IRA was under pressure from moderate Republican leaders to declare some kind of truce to keep the Anglo-Irish initiative alive.

Mr. Adams, who has consistently denied being a spokesman for the IRA, told the newspaper that Sinn Fein's response to the plan would not be made until the British government clarified it.

His remarks were made one week before Sinn Fein holds its annual conference near Dublin to debate the so-called Downing Street Declaration on Northern Ireland launched by the British and Irish prime ministers.

Mr. Major has staunchly refused to clarify the text and says he will not hold talks with Sinn Fein until it accepts the principles in the plan and gets the IRA to lay down its arms.

SINGAPORE (AFP) — From next month video games importers will have to get a permit as part of Singapore government moves to ban games with too much sex or violence in them. Speaking at a press conference late Friday, the deputy secretary of the Ministry of Information and the Arts, Lim Siam Kim, said the first two video games to be affected by the new ruling were Mortal Combat and Night Trap. Mortal Combat has a scene of a man pulling out a heart from a body while Night Trap shows a human head being drilled. Dealers have a full month to stop circulating the two video games. Importers who violate the new ruling or make false declarations in their applicafine of 1,000 Singapore : dollars (about $600) or a jail term of up to six months. Video games are very popular with the young and many parents have expressed concern to the airthorities about two much violence and sex in them.

Italian police smash prostitution smuggling ring

GENOA, Italy (AFP) — Police said Saturday they had smashed a prostitution ring which smuggled 300 young Nigerian women into this northern Italian city over the last few months. Seventeen Nigerian men were arrested during the operation, including 39-year-old Alfonsus Anyanw, a director of Italy's Nigerian Citizens' Association, police said. The network, which forced the women to become prostitutes after gaining them access to the country, operated primarily in the northeast provinces of Liguria, Piedmont and Lompardy and had links in several other European cities. Police said they also recovered large sums of money and objects such as miniature coffins used to threaten the women.

Jackson cian salutes Elizabeth Taylor

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Michael Jackson drew a nearly fiveminute standing ovation Saturday as the "Jackson family honours" turned into a lovefest between the embattled entertainer and his fans. Jackson looked relaxed and smiled broadly as the crowd of more than 12,000 at the MGM Grand Gardens welcomed him. "I love you," he told the audience repeatedly before presenting a lifetime achievement award to Motown Records mogul Berry Gordy, who helped launch the Jackson Five. Jackson later presented a similar award to good friend Elizabeth Taylor for her work in the fight against AIDS. Thank you for your prayers. Thank you for your loyalty. Thank you for your love and your friendship," Jackson told the audience. At the close of the two hour, 40 minute programme, Jackson joined other family members on the stage for a final song, If You Only Be-

NEWS IN BRIEF

Japan, Russia to resume talks

TOKYO (AFP) — Japan and Russia will resume talks on the disputed Kuril Islands on Feb. 21 and 22 in Moscow, but a major breakthrough is unlikely amid political uncertainty there, newspapers here reported Sunday. It will be the first bilateral meeting on the issue since Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa and Russian President Boris Yeltsin agreed in October to prepare to hand back two of the four Kuril islands off northern Japan. The Japanese delegation, headed by Hiroshi Fukuda, deputy vice minister for foreign affairs, hopes to go ahead with the negotiations in line with the agreement, the Sankei Shimbun said. But the newspaper said no major progress could be expected during the two-day meeting amid growing opposition in Russia to the returns, following the recent election victories of Russian nationalists. Vladimir Zhirinovsky, leader of Russia's ultranationalist Liberal Democratic Party, has said Russia would never cede territory to Japan or any other country Japan has been demanding the return of the four Kuril Islands, which were occupied by Soviet troops at the end of World War II, refusing to sign a peace treaty or offer substantial aid to Moscow until the matter is

Fierce fighting reported in Angola

LUANDA (AFP) — Government troops were locked in fierce fighting with rebel UNITA forces across Angola Saturday, an Angolan army spokesman said. Brigadier Joao Manuel told Angolan journalists the main area of fighting was around the towns of Ukumwa and Tchindjenje about 90 kilometres (55 miles) from Huambo, a UNITA rebel stronghold. The daily government paper Jornal De Angola said Friday that government troops had lost control of roads around the towns of Cubal, Ganda and Caimbambo in the Bengueal province. Gen. Manuel said the fighting was continuing Saturday around Ganda, without saying who controlled the town. He confirmed that rebels had stopped shelling Malange and Cuito where humanitarian aid flights had resumed, but added that the union for the total independence of Angola (UNITA) was planning a major offensive in several areas. Meanwhile Jornal De Angola also reported clashes round Ucua, Ambriz and Caxito in the province of Bengo, north of the Angolan capital. The Angolan government also accused UNITA of bombing some regions in the Cuando Cubango province, in the

'Japan eyes cabinet reshuffle on Feb. 28'

TOKYO (AFP) - Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa plans to announce his first cabinet reshuffle on Feb. 28 to rebuild the fragile six-month-old government, newspapers here said Sunday. The Asahi and the Mainichi newspapers said that Mr. Hosokawa was considering replacing several positions including his chief cabinet secretary and political reform minister. Finance Minister Hirohisa Fujii might lose his job following allegations that an industrial group gave him 10 million yen ($95,000) in secret donations, Asahi said. Mr. Hosokawa hopes the leaders of the seven-party coalition will consent to the reshuffle early this week, allowing him to make a final decision by Thursday, it said. Some coalition members who previously opposed the reshuffle have eased their stances. the newspaper said. Chief Cabinet Secretary Masayoshi Takemura, who is targetted for replacement, said Saturday he would accept Mr. Hosokawa's choice. "This is a matter of the prime minister's decision," he said. In place of Mr. Takemura, Foreign Minister Tsutomu Hata might take the position, while Tomiichi Mirayama, head of the Social Democratic Party (SDP), the largest in the coalition, is to join the cabinet, news reports have said.

Russia to sell carriers, submarines

TOKYO (AFP) — Russia plans to dispose of 26 warships, including aircraft carriers and submarines, in a bid to further overcome its financial troubles, a Japanese newspaper here reported Sunday. In a story dispatched from Vladivostok, the Tokyo Shimbun quoted Russian Pacific Fleet sources as saying the Russian Navy commander approved the sale last month, but had not decided on prices or buyers of the warships. Russia is to sell three aircraft carriers, eight submarines, four battle cruisers, six destroyers, two disembarcation ships and three others, the daily said. Last year Russia disposed of 81 old ships, mainly exporting them to China as material for housing construction. Russian officials said possible destinations of the ships would be China, South Korea and North Korea but added that it would carefully deal with the export following international disputes on its sale of submarines to Pyongyang. News reports said last month that North Korea had embarked on the purchase of some 40 submarines through a small Japanese trading company in a deal estimated to be worth $8 million. The Russian officials said they hoped to dispose of the ships through third countries including Japan and the United States. The newspapers said a U.S. company already asked the Russian Navy Headquarters for an aircraft carrier to be used as a restaurant.

Abkhazian leader to meet U.N. envoy

GENEVA (AFP) — Vladislav Ardzinba, head of Abkhazian separatists in Georgia, arrived for talks with U.N. special envoy Edouard Brunner here Sunday ahead of new peace negotiations on the conflict said to have killed 11,000 Georgian troops.

U.N. spokeswoman Therese-Gastaud said Mr. Ardzinba and Mr. Brunner, special representative of U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Ghali, were meeting ahead of peace talks scheduled to resume here Tues day after a month-long break.

Tuesday's negotiations, the third round to date, would focus on the political status of Abkhazia, an autonomous republic in northwestern Georgia where a year-long bloody separatist conflict led to the routing of Georgian forces in September.

Last Thursday, Abkhazia accused Georgia of massing troops, armoured vehicles and artillery near its border for a possible fresh invasion. The Georgian government denied the charge.

Greece urged to drop blockade of Macedonia

ATHENS (AFP) - Six of Greece's partners in the European Union (EU) have called on Athens to lift its economic blockade of Macedonia, a European diplomat said here Sunday.

The source said the six ambassadors or representa-tives of London, Paris, Bonn. Rome, the Hague and Copenhagen, had jointly called on Greece to drop its action against the former Yugoslav republic during a meeting Friday night with the Secretary General of the Foreign Ministry, Christos Zacharakis. It said the ambassadors had

Anti-racist to challenge Mussolini in Italian polls

ROME (R) - The daughter of a Somali princess will challenge the granddaughter of wartime fascist dictator Benito Mussolini for a seat in parliament in Italy's elections next The battle in Naples between anti-racist Dacia Valent and neo-fascist Alessandra Mussolini was set as candidates in the March 27-28 elections registered their bids for office before an official deadline expires Menday night.

Tycoon-turned-politician Silvio Berlusconi, spearheading a rising right, will run in Rome's historic centre, where he will be opposed by current Budget Minister Luigi Spaventa, an independent campaigning for the broad left 'progressives" pact.

Ms. Valent, 31, was catapulted from obscurity as a black policewoman in Sicily to a seat in the European Parliament in 1989 on a leftist ticket after she was racially insulted and attacked in a petrol station near Palermo.

In a statement, she said she would run in Mussolini's Naples base for a "rainbow coalition for civil rights" and appealed to parties on the left and in the centre to stay out of the battle and make it a straight race.

"I like Alessandra Mussolini. She's intelligent, enterprising and, when it comes to down to it, she's as black as I Ms. Valent, whose father was an Italian diplomat, told Corriere Della Sera newspap-Ms. Mussolini, a deputy in the outgoing parliament for the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI), was not available for a response. She has said the anti-semitic race laws of her grandfather, who united then Italian Somaliland with Ethiopia in 1935 in an imperialist military adventure, were a mistake forced upon him by Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler.

Candidates in the elections, expected to redraw the political map after Italy's corruption scandals, will be elected for the first time on a winner-takes-all constituency system for 75 per cent of the 630 seats in the lower house of parliament.

The remaining 25 per cent will be decided by proportional representation — giving the

NEWS IN BRIEF

Saudi Arabia sack Beenhakker

DUBAI (R) - World Cup qualifiers Saudi Arabia have sacked Dutch coach Leo Beenhakker who had been hired to lead them to the finals in the United States this year. An official statement issued Saturday night said the decision had been taken in consultation with Beenhakker and implied that Saudi Arabia were unhappy with the way things were going under the Dutchman. "It has become clear that the short time seft until the World Cup will not help in reaching our goals, the statement said. It said agreement had been reached with a new coach but declined to name him. Saudi Mohammad Al Kharashi would train the team until the arrival of the new coach, it added. Beenhakker, who previously coached Ajax Amsterdam and Real Madrid, signed a contract with Saudi Arabia in November after the national side had sacked Brazilian coach Jose Candido.

Newborn named Lillehammer

LILLEHAMMER (R) — An Italian couple in Bologna got carried away by Olympic fervour and named their infant daughter 'Lillehamer'. "Imagine naming a girl 'Hammer'." lamented Tullio Ferraco at the Italian Olympic Committee after hearing of the new Miss Lillehammer in the north Italian town. Lillehammer, founded in 1827, is partly built on land belonging to an old farm called 'Hammer'. Hammer means the same as the English word hammer and is also surname in Norway. 'Lille' means small. Last month, one Norwegian woman called Lilly Hammer arranged her own alternative Olympics, joking she thought she had been awarded the games.

Only 200 at final of Chinese tournament

BELIING (R) — Only about 200 spectators turned out to watch second seed Yayuk Basuki of Indonesia beat Japan's Kyoko Nagatsuka in the final of China's first women's professional tennis tournament Sunday. Most of the fans in the indoor stadium, which can hold several thousands people, were foreign residents. The tournament has attracted little interest all week. Basuki, ranked 38th in the world, beat the English-seeded Nagatsuka 6-4 6-2 to take her fifth tour title since she turned professional in 1991.

McKinney retains IBF title

PRETORIA (R) — Kennedy McKinney of the United States retained the International Boxing Federation (IBF) juniorfeatherweight title when he stopped Jose Rincones of Venezuela after two minutes and 40 seconds of the fifth round in their scheduled 12-round fight Sunday.

Ma's army storms to victory

BEIJING (AFP) — China's flourishing team of women distance runners, known as "Ma's family army" swept to victory in the international women's road relay here Sunday. The six-member Chinese team, coached by the mercurial Ma Junren and including 3,000m and 10,000m world record holder Wang Junxia, finished the 42,195 kilometre marathon course in a time of 2hr 16min 23 sec, ahead of Romania and Russia. Wang, Qu Yunxia, Zhang Lirong, Wang Xiaoxia, Zhang Linli and Lu Ou are all from the northeastern province of liaoning the training base for Ma's team of runners which took the aghletics world by storm by rewriting the middle and longdistance record, books at the world championships and intional games last year. Teams competing in the $50,000 event came from Australia, Canada, China, the Netherlands, Japan, Kenya, South Korea, Romania, Russia and the United

Kidderminster target league | Navratilova place after West Ham defeat | chalks up

LONDON (AFP) - Kidderminster Harriers set their sights on a place in the English league after their FA Cup fairytale ended in tears with a 1-0 home defeat by West Ham in the fifth round Saturday.

Lee Chapman's 69th minute goal scuppered Harriers' hopes of becoming the first nonleague side through to the quarter-finals since 1914, but the Vauxhall conference promotion-chasers plan to build on their fabulous cup Kidderminster manager Graham Allner said: "I'm proud of them all. They've done everything that has been asked of them, but in the end the gulf between us and the premiership was just that little bit too much for us.

"I have no complaints about the result and we've had a terrific run. It wasn't to be for us in the end and now we've got to concentrate on the

Koss sets another record, wins his third gold medal

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) - Norwegian speedskater Johann Olav Koss triple shattered another world record Sunday to become the first triple gold medalist of the Lillehammer games. German ski jumper Jens Weissflog made a soaring Olympic comeback, and Switzerland finally broke into the win column.

In winning his fourth career gold, Koss gave Norway its eighth of these games - one more than Russia for overall medals.

Koss, the "boss" of Hamar's Viking ship hall, smashes his own world record in the men's 10,000-metre, winning the speedskating marathon in 13 minutes, 30,55 seconds. He lopped off a hefty 12.99 seconds from the record be set at Heerenveen, Netherlands, three years ago.

"Johann, Johann, Johann," the flag-waving Norwegian fans chanted as a weary Koss clutched his knees after crossing the finish line. Saturday's 100,000 record marked the first time a speedskater has set world records in three events at a single Olympics. Last week, the 25-yearold Oslo medical student broke the 5,000 and 1,500 marks. Koss' teammate, Kjell Storelid, was the surprise silver medalist and Dutch skater Bart Veldkamp, who beat Koss in the 10,000 at Albertville, had to settle for bronze this time. The 29-year-old Weissflog captured gold in the 120-metre jumping competition, 10 years after his last Olympic triumph as a member of the East German team at Sarajevo. Weisstlog overtook Espon Bredesen of Norway with a mighty second jump of 133 metres after managing 129,5 metres on his first leap.

"I was really going for a big jump because I was trying to put presssure on him. Perhaps that worked," said Weissflog. After setting a hill record of 135.5 metres on his first jump, the 25-year-old Norwegian faltered on the second, jumping just 122 metres.

Forl Bredesen, the silver medal capped a brilliant comeback from his disastrous showing at Albertville, where be finished 58th and last in one event. Austria's Andreas Goldberger won Sunday's bronze medal.

Switzerland, an Alpine nation without a skiing medal, had to sooth its wounded pride with a 1-2 finish on the bobsled chute Sunday.

Gustav Weder, steering the Switzerland-I sled, became the first repeat winner in the Olympic two man bob.

Russia added medal no. 15 when Sergei Tarasov won the men's 20-kilometre biathlon, a mix of cross-country skiing and rifle marksmanship.

Defending champion Gustav Weder, with brakeman Donat Acklin, became the first repeat winner of the two-man event. His .05 of a second margin of victory was the second closest in Olympic history.

"In the last run, I risked everything," said Weder, Swiss teammates Reto Goetschi and brakeman Guido Acklin, who led by 03 second going into the fourth and final run, won the silver. Italy's no. 1 sled, with Gunther Huber and Sefand Ticci aboard, took

The highly touted U.S. hightech sleds finished 13th and 14th.

A faint glimmer of an Alpine medal appeared on the Swiss horizon Sunday.

Norwegians, American camp out to see Olympics

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — A lone igloo builder, working snow-block by snowblock, set up camp Saturday among the tents that housed Norwegians and their chattering teeth through the night.

French face Olympic Waterloo

LILLEHAMMER (AFP) — France's Winter Olympic morale, hit by a bitter public row with sports Minister Michele Alliot-Marie, dipped again Sunday when gold favourite Patrice Bailty-Salins flopped in the biathlon. Happy hosts of the Albertville Games, where they bagged three gold medals, the self-styled flying froggies have barely croaked in Lillehammer.

Philippe Condelero's bronze in the men's figure skating lifted spirits but beleaguered team chiefs had been counting on Bailly-Salins, the World Cup leader, to finally give them a victory.

The Olympic team left Paris predicting a medal haul of 12. But Condelero's medal was only their third after Anne Briand's biathlon silver and

Japan's crown prince to visit Mideast

TOKYO (AFP) — Japan's Crown Prince Naruhito and Crown Princess Masako will visit the Middle East in October on their first trip overseas since they married last June, a daily newspaper said Sunday. The Yomiuri Shimbun, quoting Foreign Ministry sources, said the couple would visit Oman, Qatar, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. During the two-week trip, the couple is to meet with each country's head of state, and visit ancient ruins, tourist sites and oil fields, the newspaper said. The crown prince was originally scheduled to visit the region in February 1991 but put off the trip because of the Gulf war. In January last year, his trip was cancelled again after allied forces carried out air strikes against Iraq.

Human cargo discovered in container

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Kurdish refugees from Iraq, sealed in a container and loaded onto an Estonian ferry's cardeck, are rescued Sunday after nearly suffocating on the night crossing to Sweden. The 64 men, women and children spent nine hours in the container before heat and lack of oxygen forced them to pound on the walls of their metal box. Normally there is no one on the cardeck during ferry crossings of the Baltic Sea, and the sound of pounding fists was faint compared to the cracking of ice under the ship. But a crewmember, making a brief fire patrol three hours after departure from Tallinn, Estonia, heard them.

Arab boy wins $4m on Israel soccer pools

TEL AVIV (AFP) — A 16-year-old Israeli Arab schoolboy has won $4 million on Israel's state football pools after predicting all 15 matches. The teenager from Majd Al Karum in the Galilee, who did not want to be named, found out Saturday night that he had hit the jackpot. With a father working in a Haifa bottling plant, four brothers and three sisters. he told Israel's Arabic-language radio station: "Yes, -I'm quite happy." His father said: "I'm not going back on the production line."

Kuwait pays compensation for Iraqis

KUWAIT (AP) - Kuwait has paid the equivalent of $270,000 to compensate Iraqi farmers and homeowners who are losing property along the redrawn border with Iraq, the United Nations said Sunday. A statement from the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observer Mission, which patrols the frontier, said the sum of 71.5 million Iraqi dinars will go into a special U.N. fund. The Iraqis have until Feb. 28 to present claims. The farmers will have rights to 56 million Iraqi dinars, while the remainder will be paid out to owners of 206 dwellings in Umm Qasr. The new border, demarcated over a year ago by a U.N. team, moved 11 oil wells, some farmland and an old naval base at Umm Qasr to the Kuwaiti side.

Uday Hussein: God will undo Israel-PLO deal

BAGHDAD (R) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's eldest son, Uday, says God will bring down any agreement between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) on Palestinian self-rule. Uday based his remarks, broadcast in a Saturday television interview and published by his Babel newspaper, on a verse of the Koran saying that Muslims shall enter Jerusalem twice. "The Palestinian issue is in the hands of the Almighty..." if the agreement takes place God's word will not materialise," Uday said. Arab Muslims conquered Jerusalem for the first time in the sixth century and Uday said they were bound to retake it. Uday was one of four Iraqi intellectuals taking part in a seminar on Iraq's economy, which 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

DUBAI (AFP) - A taxi-driver has been jailed for one month for blowing kisses at a British woman in the car's rear-view mirror. a United Arab Emirates newspaper said Sunday. Al Khaleej said the 26-year-old Briton was sitting in the back of the cab in the emirate of Dubai when she saw the driver pretending to kiss her in the mirror. "The woman complained to police after she saw the driver making such provocative moves," the paper said. The 24-year-old driver was jailed on Saturday. His name and nationality were not disclosed, but taxi-drivers in the emirates are from India, Pakistan and Afghanistan.

Four airlines fail Heathrow semtex test

LONDON (AFP) - Four airlines at London's busiest airport failed to detect fake bombs placed in luggage by government security officials, raising fears of a possible repeat of the Lockerbie disaster, the Sunday Times newspaper reported. X-ray machines at Britain's Virgin Atlantic, U.S. carriers United and American, and the Dutch KLM airline, failed to spot the deactivated bombs planted on children's dolls despite containing detonators, electrical cable and semtex plastic explosive. The explosive posed no threat to the public as it had been chemically neutralised to avoid an accident during the January security check at Heathrow airport, the paper reported. United later sacked an employee after failing the Department of Transport inspectors' test, the Sunday Times added. A semtex bomb destroyed a Pan Am flight over the Scottish town of Lockerbie in 1988, killing all 270 people on

After Bobbitt, Bohbott shoots dead husband

KYRIAT SHMONA, occupied West Bank (AFP) — Carmela Bohbott was to face an Israeli court on Sunday after emptying an automatic rifle into her brutal husband after 20 years of marital abuse. The 40-year-old's drama has been compared with the case of Lorena Bobbitt who cut off her husband's penis and was acquitted by a U.S. court last month. Carmela told police the beating that Yehuda Bohbott, 43, gave her on Friday night was "worse than usual." Bleeding, she sought refugee in the bedroom of her soldier son, grabbed his assault rifle and returned to the living room. Yehuda died immediately in a hail of bullets. His wife was taken to hospital to dress the bruises and cuts all over her body. "We all knew who Yehuda Bohbott was, his violent ways and the number of women he had had in his life," said a neighbour. "Nobody will mourn that man who frightened all those around him." As m the Bobbitt affair, women's rights groups have sprung to the defence of the battered wife and demanded the Kyriat Shmona court set Carmela free.

UAE to refer some cases to Islamic courts

ABU DHABI (R) - United Arab Emirates (UAE) President Sheikh Zayed Ben Sultan Al Nahayan has ordered that a wide range of crimes be tried in Islamic Sharia courts rather than in civil courts, officials said on Sunday. Lawyers said the cases involving both UAE nationals and foreigners specified in the president's decree comprised murder, manslaughter, theft, adultery, juvenile and drugs offences and crimes that cause "We order the implementation of the Islamic Sharia law in all (such cases)... and that Sharia courts across the country should decide these cases," the decree said, according to a text published in UAE newspapers. The lawyers said the new decree would be applied in all the UAE's seven emirates and would also cover foreign offenders. Such crimes have so far been tried in civil courts although sentencing has been based on Islamic Sharia. The new decree means such courts no longer have the authority to try such crimes. ### Schoolbus hijackers demand ransom, aid for Afghan refugees

ISLAMABAD (Agencies) — Three masked Afghan gunmen holding Pakistani schoolchildren hostage Sunday demanded a $5.5 million ransom, opening of the Afghan-Pakistan border and food aid for Kabul, officials here said.

Interior Minister Naseerullah Babar, who was late Sunday negotiating the hostages' release, has given assurances to the gunmen that their demand for 2,000 truckloads of food to be delivered to Kabul would be met.

"I have assured the three (Afghans) that they can get even 2,000 trucks of food supplies," he told reporters, adding that aid would be delivered even if it required flying helicopters in to besieged Kabul.

The Afghan capital has been suffering severe food shortages since rival factions renewed fighting for control of the city. (see page 2) whom are drug traffickers or addicts, a top prison official disclosed in an interview published Sunday. It was the first official figure for the total number of inmates in Iran since the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Assadollah Lajevardi told the English-language newspaper Tehran Times that the prisoners included 3,776 Afghans and fewer than 10 other nationals, but he gave no other details on foreign convicts.

The Islamic Republic still hosts more than two million Afghan refugees from the war in their country. Moreover, Iran is a transit route for drugs entering from Afghanistan and Pakistan destined for Europe. Mr. Lajevardi, the head of Iran's prison organisation, said 53 per cent of the detainees were drug traffickers and addicts, down from the 65 per cent reported in October 1992. Women comprise five per

Yeltsin had 'auite a serious' cold

MOSCOW (AFP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin caught "quite a serious" cold and had to make a real effort to be at the Kremlin to meet British Prime Minister John Major last Tuesday, Mr. Yeltsin's spokesman Vyacheslav Kostikov said at the weekend. Interviewed on the Ostankino Television channel Saturday night. Mr. Kostikov however indicated that Mr. Yeltsin was now fully recovered, confirming reports on Russian radio. Mr. Kostkov said Mr. Yeltsin, who convalesced at his dacha in Zavidovo, 80 kilometres outside Moscow, had put his time to good use drawing up the general policy speech he is to give to parliament on Feb. 24. "Making the most of his indisposition, if one can say so, he took a certain time-out from politics, away from his routine activities, to finish work on a very important political document, namely his speech to the Federal Assembly, effectively to Russia and the Russians. He said that the speech covered 70 pages, four or five hours reading matter, but Mr. Yeltsin would only read out a 30 to 40-minute resume in parliament, while a copy of the speech in its entirety would be distributed to both houses (the State Duma and the Federation Council) the same day.

Clinton's eye getting better

WASHINGTON (R) — President Bill Clinton said his left eye, which was puffy and bloodshot from a mild infection, had improved to the point where he no longer looks "like a monster from the deep." Mr. Clinton, following a nationallybroadcast address from the Oval Office, said his eye was much better. Earlier in the week he was diagnosed as having viral conjunctivitis, commonly known as pinkeye. "The doctor told me that nothing would heal it but time," said Mr. Clinton, whose eye was only slightly puffy. Much of the redness around the pupil of the eve also had cleared up. "At least I don't look like a monster from the deep, which I did two days ago," said Mr. Clinton, who has been taking eye drops laced with antibiotics.

Queen Elizabeth arrives in Guyana

GEORGETOWN (AFP) Britain's Queen Elizabeth II arrived here Saturday, as Guyanese President Cheddi Jagan said there were no hard feelings left over from a power struggle 30 years ago. Most of the nation's adults recalled that it was Queen Elizabeth who signed the order dismissing Mr. Jagan as premier in 1964 when he refused to accept defeat at the polls. Prior to the arrival Mr. Jagan told journalists that both he and the queen had forgotten the events of past years. Accompanied by her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, the queen arrived from Anguilla to a rousing welcome at Timehri International Airport before driving along the 26-mile road route to the National Cultural Centre. At the airport the royal couple was greeted by a welcoming committee including British High Commissioner David Johnson, Mr. Jagan and his wife Janet. Several people in large crowd waved both the Union Jack and the flag of Guyana,

Expedition plans to trace 'silk route'

NEW DELHI (Al ?) — Indian and Chinese adventures plan to undertake a 10,000-kilometres (6,000-mile) expedition through inhospitable Central Asian terrain in an ambitious bid to rechart the ancient "silk road." The journey will begin from Tashkent on May 1 and traverse Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Kirghizia before entering China and then return to India via Nepal, the Press Trust of India reported Sunday. Four Chinese will be among the members of the 17-member expedition, which will include experts in geolgoy, demography, herbal medicine, agriculture and archaeology, the agency said. Expedition president, retired Indian army Major H.P.S. Ahluwalia, said the journey was aimed at rediscovering trade, cultural and religious links between India and Central Asia and China.

Key points in Yemen reconciliation accord

AMMAN (AFP) - The main points of the Yemeni reconciliation accord were signed in Amman on Sunday. The 32page document was drawn up by a committee representing Yemen's main political parties. to end a seven-month crisis that has threatened the country's unity.

Security

- The arrest and trial of all those involved in political assassinations and other security incidents and extradition of wanted persons through Interpol or diplomatic channels.

 The committee affirms the need for stronger measures against the carrying of weapons and against military training camps or any other centres for training in acts of violence. Implementation of such measures must not exceed three months.

- Removal of all checkpoints in cities, whether they belong to the Interior Ministry. the Defence Ministry or are jointly run by the two ministries. The Interior Ministry is entrusted with assigning locations for such checkpoints provided it cooperates with the Defence Ministry. A committee will be formed for this purpose within two weeks. A national reconciliation conference is to be held between tribes to end bloodshed and revenge attacks. Anyone indulging in revenge attacks will be considered an outlaw and severe measures will be taken against him by the competent authorities. Reconciliation should be announced within one month.

 Redeployment of some army units in the provinces of Taaz, Lahaj, Ibian, Shabwa. Beidha and Mareb. Their new positions will be determined by an armed forces committee such that they meet the requirements of the country's defence strategy and protect vital installations. A decision to this effect should be issued within a week and implementation should be immediate.

- Freezing of all mobilisation, recruitment or armament campaigns.

 Setting up an intelligence service, restructuring the interior ministry by merging its various security units and evacuating the armed forces from cities. They should be redeployed within two months

- Restructuring of the armed forces.

Administration and state

- Sanaa will be the political capital and Aden the economic hub, each forming an autonomous province with independent financial and administrative duties as well as elected councils. - Defining the powers of the presidential council, the president and his deputy and revising the authority of the council's office. Islam should be religion and Sharia the law of the state. - Authority should be in the hands of the people, who should exercise it directly through a referendum or general elections. They may also exercise it through the legislative, executive and judicial bodies and local councils. — The state should be based on democracy, the peaceful use of authority and party pluralism, as well as administrative and financial decentralisation.

 Public freedom is to be protected, human rights respected, and freedom guaranteed for trade union, professional, intellectual and cultural activities, while scientific work is to be encouraged in all fields.

- Parliament should be elected directly and freely by the people, while the advisory council has the right to advise on the budget and development plans.

 The presidential council comprises five members, to be elected by parliament and the advisory council. The presidential council should elect its chairman and deputy chairman. The council members are not entitled to more than two terms. Its functions cover representation of the state, calling elections, dissolving parliament after consultation with the cabinet and calling a re-
